ADVERTISING GUIDE

Washington State Magazine's combination of journalistic excellence and engaged readership offers exceptional advertising value as a regional university magazine.

editorial mission

Washington State Magazine is the window on Washington State University—around the state and around the world—for more than 150,000 well-educated, multinational readers.

We tell Washington State's stories. No matter what the issue of the day, it becomes our story, through the eyes and work of our people. We are serious about giving our readers the best possible reporting on science and academe. But we also like humor and sports, good food and wine, great photography and thoughtful essays. We tell the stories of our readers themselves, our alumni, through lively profiles.

We are Washington State's magazine. We are about people and place, about great ideas and the good things in life, about doing good in and making sense of a fascinating world.

It should be a no-brainer: going to the grocery store, you'll find a plethora of products designed to help you live a healthier, more active lifestyle. But for many people, the idea of making these lifestyle changes is a daunting task. That's where the University of Washington's Center for Health Systems Research and Analysis comes in. The center, led by Dr. David Asch, is a leading research and practice center in the field of health systems research. Asch, who is also a professor of medicine at the University of Washington, is a leading expert in the field of health systems research. He has led several large-scale research projects, including the National Institutes of Health-funded study of the impact of the Affordable Care Act on the delivery of care. Asch is also a leading expert in the field of patient safety.
